I walk with my Rody. The wind blows through our hair.

"Now that we've been together for three months, I think it's time for this."

I pull my cell phone out of my pocket and show him a luxurious men's jewelry boutique.

"A pair of rings... for us? That's a great idea!" He says to me, smiling even more than before. "But they look like wedding rings." Rody then gets nervous. "V-Vin-Vincent! It's too soon! Us getting married..."

"We don't have to get married right away." I said to reassure him. "But I think it's time we showed the world our union."

"With a pair of rings?"

"Exactly. So, what do you say?"

Rody calms down and blushes. He's so cute when his face takes on color. My Rody.

"You're right!" He exclaims happily. "So..."

He looks at the available rings. I smile. My Rody forever.
